

I. True or False (5 points)

1. Electronic files and digital documents can be recognized as valid and acceptable, similar to traditional paper documents.
2. Digital signatures can be legally binding and may be used in online agreements, business transactions, and official documents.
3. Online transactions, including buying, selling, and sending payments, are protected under the law to support safe and fair e-commerce.
4. Screenshots, email records, and chat logs can serve as electronic evidence when reporting online fraud or digital disputes.
5. Users have the responsibility to practice safe online behavior, such as verifying information and protecting their accounts.